

A photograph of four apples arranged in a cluster against a solid black background. The apples appear to be of the same variety, featuring a pale yellow-green base color with distinct red or brownish streaks and patches. They have small, dark green stems and are positioned at different angles, with some partially overlapping others. The lighting highlights the texture of the apple skin and the bright areas where the light hits them.

